How does it work?

For the second year, the Edmonton Journal has asked readers to vote for their favourites in a range of categories.

Readers are invited to go to a special website and fill out an online form with their choices or they can fill out our published paper ballot and mail in.

The results of this survey are tabulated, and the names of the businesses that top each category's vote totals are published in the special Readers' Choice newspaper section you are now reading.

The winning businesses that choose to advertise are also featured in this special publication.

A primary goal of the Readers' Choice polling process is fairness – i.e. one person, one vote.

Attempts at submitting multiple forms are restricted by the use of a combination of user e-mail addresses, IP addresses and other forms of tracking.

In addition, all votes are reviewed multiple times to ensure accuracy.

Once the polling is complete, the results are tabulated and a list of the year's winners is compiled.

We consider the Readers' Choice Awards one of our most important and significant projects each year, and we hope our advertisers and readers do too.
